Promoting Stronger Dialogue and Better Understanding

On June 28, 2011, Kazakhstan has assumed the one-year Chairmanship of the Council of Foreign Ministers of the newly renamed Organization of Islamic Cooperation, a 57-nation organization representing 20 percent of the world's population.

During its chairmanship, Kazakhstan will work to improve security for all, address social and economic problems and champion the development of science, technology and environmental protection.

Together with all its partners and according to the chairmanship motto, Kazakhstan will work to promote Peace, Cooperation and Development.

Above all else, at this critical moment in history, when the world faces unprecedented challenges and remarkable transformations, Kazakhstan will work tirelessly to promote a greater dialogue and better understanding between cultures and civilizations.

Kazakhstan's experience as a multi-ethnic and multi-religious tolerant society can facilitate this critical dialogue, helping to foster peace, mutual understanding and a safer world.
