

KAZAKHSTAN

Working for a Nuclear Safe World

Can you imagine a nuclear safe world?

In Kazakhstan, we are doing more than imagining — President Nursultan Nazarbayev has made nuclear responsibility a national mandate. Twenty years ago, Kazakhstan achieved independence. Our first order of business? Renouncing all nuclear weapons and shutting down the Soviet nuclear test site in Semipalatinsk. Kazakhstan marks the 20th anniversary of the closing of the Semipalatinsk test site by hosting the international forum “For a Nuclear Weapon Free World” on October 12-13.

Leaders and activists from the non-proliferation movement all over the world will come together to do more than champion the cause of nuclear safety — they will work to make it a reality.

International Forum for a Nuclear Weapon Free World

Astana, Kazakhstan

October 12 and 13, 2011

www.nuclearsafeworld.org

Kazakhstan. A Global Leader in Nuclear Responsibility.